A PIONEERING STUDY FOR A DISCIPLE OF FREUD

By Steven H Propp

Wilhelm Stekel (1868-1940) was an Austrian physician and psychologist, and one of Sigmund Freud's earliest followers, who later had a falling-out with Freud. (Stekel ultimately committed suicide.)

Here are some representative quotations from the book:

"Our sexual life begins with the day of our birth and it ends with death."

"But I maintain: All the injuries ascribed to onanism exist only in the physician's fancy. All the alleged injuries are artefacts, they are the consequences of the prevailing system of morals----a system which for two thousand years has combated sexuality and all pleasure-seeking."

"Let us, once for all, abolish the fiction of normalcy in sexual matters."

"I have never yet found any evil consequences among persons who did not believe the practice to be harmful. All the harm is generated by autosuggestion by the feelings of anxiety."

"(Onanism) is a return to infantile gratification. It is a symptom of psychic infantilism, characteristic of the neurotic. At the right time the child abandons its childish ways if properly trained to assume the role of an adult. But this is not to be achieved through taboos and threats; it is a question of education and of growth through freedom, such as may be attained through psychoanalysis."

"I feel myself also but a part of the great social wave which now relentlessly insists upon greater sexual freedom. But I indulge in no illusion, and I do not hold that we are witnessing the dawn of an unhampered, free sexual life."
