Mark Dodd arrived in Broome in 1978 as a 20-year-old looking for adventure, after working his way across northern Australia. There he fell in with the crew of the fabled DMcD, one of the last of the old wooden pearling luggers that still worked the Kimberley coast diving for pearl shell. He came aboard as a deckhand before graduating to become one of the pearl shell divers. He dived for four seasons, living a life on the luggers and in the pubs and exotic alleys of Broome that would have been recognisable to pearl divers for 100 years before, but has now sadly disappeared forever.

This story encompasses it all: the cramped camaraderie of life on a small wooden lugger, what it is like to be 40 metres down to the sea floor at the end of precarious length of air hose, as you search for shell whilst keeping one eye out for tiger sharks.

His book is both an adventure and a wonderfully nostalgic account of an industry and a way of life that has gone forever.

A compelling read

By Marguerite Delbet

In this book Mark Dodd relates his experience as a pearl fisher in Western Australia. The description of the boats he works on, the fishing techniques, the people he interacts with are precise, colourful and slightly disturbing. Young people basically risking their lives for good money in a remote location. It smells of the sea, adventure and hard work. Dodd's writing style is quick and easy - he became a journalist after his adventures around Broome. There are also some great photos that help imagine the world he describes. Highly recommended.

I really enjoyed this book, gives the reader ...

By Reader

I really enjoyed this book, gives the reader a clear picture of life in Broome before it became the tourist mecca it is today. Mark Dodd brought the pearling industry to life. Kept me enthralled, what else has he written.
